

INTERGENERATIONAL INTERACTIVE LIFETIME
JOURNALING/DIARY AND ADVICE/GUIDANCE SYSTEM

Background of the Invention

5 This invention relates to journals and recording lifetime events and history.

Throughout our lives significant events, lessons, relationships, and other experiences are woven into the fabric of our lives, strand by strand. Lives pass too 10 soon without rich and important stories, wisdom, and philosophies being passed on to children, grandchildren, and generations beyond.

Journals are often begun with the intention of continuing them for some time. Yet we can easily 15 become frustrated with not saying what we really want to about an experience, or forgetting the details about an important lesson learned. How many times have we stared at a blank page, eager to record an event but with no clear idea of what to say? A simple blank book 20 does not inspire one to get to the real heart of an experience. This invention accomplishes that abundantly, through the use of thousands of carefully-constructed prompts tailored to life's specific stages.
Questions get the writing process flowing, and create a 25 deep and comprehensive inter-generational record of each life and a digital archive of those objects which are important to each life interactively through the Internet.

Summary of the Invention

30 In accordance with the invention, a system is provided to collect one's life stories as the person lives them. Through different phases of one's life, the system prompts or otherwise interactively cooperates with the person so as to assist the person 35 in describing in the person's own words the important things of each day, creating memories of births, marriages, loss, family events, work experiences and daily life experiences, for example.

Accordingly, it is an object of the present invention to provide an improved system for 5 interactively collecting and archiving a lifetime history which is accessible to generations to follow.

It is a further object of the present invention to furnish an improved lifetime story system to provide 10 guidance and record events throughout a person's life and extending into future generations.

It is yet another object of the present invention to provide an improved journaling system and a device presenting publication.

15 The subject matter of the present invention is particularly pointed out and distinctly claimed in the concluding portion of this specification. However, both the organization and method of operation, together with further advantages and objects thereof, may best 20 be understood by reference to the following description taken in connection with accompanying drawings wherein like reference characters refer to like elements.

Brief Description of the Drawing

25 FIG. 1 is a block diagram of a system according to the present invention and related product lines.

Detailed Description

The system according to a preferred embodiment of 30 the present invention comprises an intergenerational lifetime interactive diary/journaling/advice book system.

Referring to FIG. 1, a block diagram of an exemplary structure of a system implementing the 35 invention, a user's computer 10 interacts with the system computer 14, for example via the internet or other suitable communication link 12. A vault 13 may be provided on the central computer for storage of information as noted hereinbelow. One or more product 5 vendors 16 or professional assistance providers 18 are also suitably linkable to the system computer, either by interactive communication therewith, or by entry in a database of contact information or an information library. Plural other users 10' may also suitably 10 interact with the user 10. The system computer may be provided by an internet service provider, as an interactive web page, for example, accessed by a browser, whether operating on a computer, a phone, a pda device, or the like. The system is suitably 15 accessible via the Internet or world wide web, for example.

In use, the system as presented to the user is structured in a manner similar to the progress of a person's life, which may be provided in plural volumes 20 or books. Therefore, the system begins with a first volume which may be called, for example, The Great Event, presenting the beginning of a person's life.

This first volume in the series possesses a fundamental difference from other "baby books" 25 indicative of the uniqueness the system of the present invention brings to a crowded market. The system is structured with the concept that an individual's history begins not with birth, but with conception, and that the record of a life must include the nine months 30 of pregnancy. This first volume moves from conception through birth, following all the amazing milestones of early childhood and ends just at the very beginning of the school experience, that first big step away from home and into the big world. The first seven years of 35 life's experiences are recorded through the use of interactive prompts that parents can respond to alone or with their child. Product sponsors may offer special discounts to users of the system, so in this first volume the new parent might find pages with 5 coupons for diaper services, learning toys and children's furniture. The professional services links may suitably connect them to experts on breastfeeding, attachment parenting, how to deal with stubborn toddlers and whatever else the learning parent needs, 10 just as he or she needs it, any time of the day or night. This volume may be completely self-contained, yet also completely integrated with its companion volumes, discussed hereinbelow.

Hereinbelow are lists of exemplary questions as 15 employed in a preferred embodiment, related to pregnancy, labor and delivery, and the like.

At the end of the first phase of this system discussed herein above, denoted "The Great Event", a next volume may suitably be provided, representative of the next phase in the person's life, School Days.

Beginning in kindergarten, this volume suitably provides prompts that describe the complete educational experience, from finger painting and story books to the day the student throws his or her mortarboard into the air and heads out into the world to begin life as an adult. School Days is conventionally divided into three phases, including elementary school (kindergarten through sixth grade); middle school (seventh through ninth grade); and high school (tenth through twelfth grade). The School Days portion includes content designed and crafted by the very individuals it is targeted to. Content contributors in their teens and early 20s provide the ever-evolving volume with content so that it remains relevant and appropriate for its audience. Subscribers to School Days will have opportunities to assume the role of spokesperson for their own history, as well as meet others their own age, discuss pertinent information, enter contests, get help with homework, e-mail, send photos, build their own Web pages and receive offers for great deals on youth-oriented products. The utility of this book surpasses any diaries or memory books currently offered to this segment of the market, through the use of multiple media.

Presented below are exemplary prompts and pointers raised in the particular embodiment in the school days section.

After the end of School Days, the next phase in a person's life is typically living on their own, so an "On My Own" volume is provided. This volume is not only a system providing an interactive journal of prompts to present questions and solicit input from the user so as to interactively build the journal or diary but also a primer of being on one's own. Links to experts and services range from finances to housework to relationships, getting the first job to furnishing one's first apartment. Advice ranges from the very practical to the more metaphysical, such as:

How do you make friends outside of the controlled atmosphere of school? How do you keep them? How do you keep in touch with the friends you are leaving behind? How do you select a roommate?

What actual steps do you need to take to make your dreams come true?

This is an especially poignant time to record a life, as the child becomes an adult and begins to learn and accept who he or she truly is. On My Own ends when the individual begins the transformation from 'me' to 'we'.

On My Own transitions a couple-oriented journal called Living Together. Living Together begins with whatever form a couple's permanent commitment takes, whether marriage or something else, and chronicles their times and "firsts" together, such as first apartment, home, vacation, etc. Links to couple counseling and other pertinent services will be provided to chronicle this important time.

Living Together segues from a couple's permanent 5 relationship together into a family oriented journal called The Family Book. The Family Book moves through the transformation from a couple into parents, from two individuals to a family. The volume follows the family's development and encourages interaction through 10 prompts. In accordance with this system invention an interactive website is suitably available to the user wherein the user can go to the website and access a so-called "family vault" (see vault 13 of FIG. 1) which offers virtual safety deposit boxes wherein online 15 participants can securely and confidently keep their own journals, private information, and photos. As a community, members encourage each other using instant messaging, online chats, video chats, and e-mail.
Ever-expanding technology will allow families separated 20 by great distance to meet online around the virtual kitchen table and share dinner while they chat. Online coaching will be instantly available to the frustrated mother whose newborn won't stop crying or whose 11 year-old didn't make the all-star team, for example.
25 Professional help can also be secured through subcontractors who can provide trained parental coaching or even serve a counseling function.

The next phase, which may be denoted On My Own, Again, is also suitably provided and enables the user 30 to examine the time in life when many individuals whose identity has been predominantly that of parent or partner find themselves abruptly finished with that role, and face the opportunities and struggles of rebuilding a new life. For the first time in decades, 35 attention moves inward. It is a time of tough questions and new decisions:

Who am I now? What do I have to offer? What makes me happy?

Interactive prompts along this line gently help 5 with this internal examining and external rebuilding to create a record of a time rich with new understanding and possibilities, as well as providing encouragement, coaching and inspiration.

After the On My Own Again/Family phase, a volume directed towards the end of life, called Before I Go, is provided. This last book in the series takes a person through the natural order of aging and coming to 15 grips with the end of his or her existence here.

Foremost, it is a chance to try to encapsulate and pass on the accumulation of wisdom and understanding of an entire lifetime, to let it live past the end of that life and be carried on to successive generations.

20 Questions and prompts are designed to lead individuals to a passage of peace, with the knowledge that they took care of the loose ends and unfinished business and told their story as best they could. This volume is suitably constructed so that it is appropriate for and 25 works as well for those who face dying prematurely as for those whose life has been long.

A lifetime is full of events, tragedies, passions, achievements and adventures, but so often our parents, grandfathers, grandmothers, and all manner of kin leave 30 this world without sharing many of their stories with us either verbally or in writing. This book is designed to prompt an individual to reveal their inner self to their loved ones by telling important life stories of their beginnings, bits and pieces of growing up, 35 adventures of adult achievements and so much more.

These prompts not only provide a written legacy for the next generation, but also the opportunity for transcendence in the release of painful memories and the experience of forgiveness and mercy.

INSERTS

1. Premature illness and death

In addition to the above volumes or journals, 10 other optional sections are also suitably provided.
 One such volume, Book of Days, serves as a companion piece to help manage time and keep track of goals and projects. This electronic book includes a family calendar, address book, concise daily journal, daily 15 schedule, bulletin board for notes, and reminder service. Information can be downloaded into hard copy.
 Users can store virtual copies of important documents in the electronic safety deposit boxes. By linking to a central database, certain information can be 20 automatically updated, for instance contact information for old friends. Services may be offered to help old friends stay in touch, in groupings ranging from two people to a large segment of one's graduating class, for instance, or to aid in finding new friends or 25 romantic interests in a new and unfamiliar city.

In addition to the Book of Days, the system also provides other "inserts" focusing on the areas of adoption, death and divorce, since not all lives neatly follow the regular structured pattern described thus 30 far. These areas are to be developed by knowledgeable professionals and by people who have lived through the particular experiences. Each of the segments has tie-ins in a number of areas. Ancillary products can be offered, such as templates for scrapbooking and so on, 35 boxes, time capsules, hope chests and other tangible places to hold treasures and memory-laden objects, informative books about how to deal with some of the challenges particular to each segment, and others that can be created as markets seem open to them.

5 Each book described above includes areas that address life's most joyous moments as well as its most difficult passages, for example the course of receiving a child during adoption, the heartbreak and process of divorce, the poignancy of watching a parent become 10 fragile, and vast other elements that affect one's life. The system is designed to operate via online interaction with users, but can alternately be downloaded into a hard copy version of each user's own design, created from resources available as part of the 15 online system. These include scrap book and manuscript templates, as specific examples.

Users can have videos available on member websites, for example, where a family can have video to be viewed by distant family members or friends, showing 20 a child's performance, family event, sports games, etc.

Each member is able to keep a personal journal under "lock and key" so that access is restricted.

Different levels of service are available, with varying storage amounts or services (e.g., still 25 picture presentation and storage might be provided at one level, while video storage and access might be provided at another). Scrapbook templates, book publishing tools, borders, designs, boxes, family totem boxes and the like may be provided. The book 30 publishing tools provided enable the user to easily turn their writings into a book form, for publication, for example. The electronic safety deposit box concept can allow storage of important papers, which are then easily accessed from anywhere. Living wills can be 35 stored, for example. The system can provide, in the book of days, for example, an index of keywords or dates, and links to the particular entries related thereto, of the person's entries.

5 The various volumes or books can cover age ranges in a preferred embodiment as follows:

- The Great Event, conception to 7 years old
- School Days - kindergarten through high school
- subdivisions thereon:
 - age 5 through 11 (grades K-6)
 - 10 age 11-13 (grades 6-8)
 - age 13-17 (high school)

On my Own - 18 years and beyond, up to the point where the commitment to another book (I to We) would take over

15 The Family Book (various age ranges of adults)

On my Own Again (after children move away, or divorce or other separation occurs)

Also, a "Book of Days" may be provided which includes a calendar, address book, personal history, 20 footnotes, daily journal, reminders, notes and the like.

Thus, in accordance with the invention, an interactive journal/diary system is provided, which includes life coaching or advice capabilities.

25 Products and services appropriate to a stage of life or particular issue in the user's life can be suitably presented to the user, and may be provided through the system. Products and services simultaneously pertinent to multiple generations, such as life insurance or 30 photographic film, may also be offered. Journaling storage boxes, which may comprise shoe-box or cigar box size storage containers up to hope chests or the like, may also be provided and offered as an add on product for sale to users, for storing personal items or 35 collectibles that have meaning to the user. By providing the association with specific products and service providers that are appropriate and which may be timely and desirable to a user of the journal system, a more useful journal is created that provides not only a place to store thoughts and memories, but also a place to go to in order to seek guidance and needed information and products at a specific time in a user's life.

The overall system can be sold as a stand alone software product, in separate modules or volumes or as an entire set. Alternatively, access is provided on a subscription or membership basis, whether by selling use time increments, or by the day/month/year, etc.

Products and benefits and services that can be associated with and incorporated into the system include: coaching, diaper service, doctor referral, on-line support groups, medical information and referral, classified ads, name banks (random name generators (for naming children or pets, for example)), furniture manufacturing, collecting box mementos, photo and video posting, message centers, calendars, announcements, party supplies, rituals, big brother/big sister programs, latest scientific research, year you were born, sponsors, community buildings, online interaction and archiving, online support, professional help and support, sponsorship partners, corporations, volunteers, organizations, list serves, garage sales, block parties, neighborhood watches, neighborhood moderators, classmates, alumni associations, Corporate sponsors for different sections, coupons, Product rating, No identifying data collection, Music - archivist, Photo collection, Advising center for School Days ,Job finding for On My Own and On My Own Again, Genealogy links, Higher education assistance scholarships, info., Vacation planning for Book of

The system can suitably be implemented as an add on content or subscription option for internet providers

While a preferred embodiment of the present 5 invention has been shown and described, it will be apparent to those skilled in the art that many changes and modifications may be made without departing from the invention in its broader aspects. The appended claims are therefore intended to cover all such changes 10 and modifications as fall within the true spirit and scope of the invention.
